

NO. PIXLEY WILL.

The Actress's Family May Fight for a Share of Her Money.

Said to Have Left a Fortune Estimated at $200,000.

Strange Silence on the Part of Her Husband, Robert Fulford.

Great surprise has been expressed among actors lately that the family of the late Annie Pixley should have been left entirely unprovided for by the popular actress, who, it will be remembered, died in London a few months ago. The family has kept very quiet about it, but it is understood that the matter is being carefully investigated, and that the whole affair will be ventilated in the courts. Robert Fulford, Miss Pixley's husband, has never returned from London, and no attempt has been made by him to discuss his wife's affairs. Miss Pixley, it is claimed, died worth $200,000. She had a $50,000 interest in the Park Theatre, Philadelphia, real estate in Texas, and in other sections of the country. The property, it appears, was all in Mr. Fulford's name, for the actress was a very bad woman of business, and had no ideas upon the management of her affairs. There is a gentleman now in this city who is willing to swear that Miss Pixley, a few months before her death, told him that she intended to provide for her family. This family consists of her mother, two sisters, Alice and Lucy, and two brothers, Gus and Starr. Miss Pixley was a warm-hearted, affectionate and most lovable woman, and members of her family cannot believe that she forgot them. The report is that she had spoken of, in fact, nothing has been spoken of by her family, and a close watch is kept upon her possessions. They say that she was seriously annoyed at the losses she sustained the last two seasons of her career. Her comic-opera venture was a failure, and her subsequent dramatic work was equally unsuccessful. He was anxious for her to retire while she was still rich, but before the illness from which she died she was again ready to start out, and her company for this season was engaged. When she was in New Orleans a short time ago she was examined by a physician, who told her that she was one of the healthiest women he had ever seen, and that she might live to be a hundred. Her family heard with the greatest astonishment of her sudden death, but there was never any talk of a will, for they felt confident that she would recover. Her body was cremated in London, and the ashes, it was announced, would be interred by the side of her little son in Canada. The ashes, however, are still with Mr. Fulford in London. The members of the family have endured this in silence for some time, but their indignation has leaked out. It has been discussed among the former members of her company, and a search for light upon the subject is being made.

WOMEN STRIKERS FIGHT.

Lively Row in Front of Bondy's Cigar Factory.

A crowd of fifty Bohemian women cigar-makers, who have been on strike since Monday, almost created a riot in the vicinity of Bondy's cigar factory, at Second street and First avenue, at 2 o'clock this morning. The strike was caused through a reduction in their price of labor, from $1.00 to $1.00 per thousand cigars.

This out in their pay did not affect a hundred others, who remained at work, and it led to frequent fights.

This morning the strikers gathered long before the hour of opening of the factory doors, but Policeman Crowe and two others kept them moving about.

At 2 o'clock the strikers stopped several of the workmen and compelled some of them by force of punishment to turn back and go home.

One of the cigar-makers named Mary Levy, eighteen years old, of 121 Chrystie street, would not be intimidated. When she persisted in going to work, a man named Gottlieb Lenhardt, also a cigar-maker, of 48 East Seventy-third street, hit her with a blow.

Policeman Crowe had his attention called to this by Richard Bondy, son of the cigar-maker. When the police arrived to arrest Lenhardt the strikers blocked his path.

Mr. Crowe forced a passage through the mob and captured Lenhardt in a doorway at Sixty-eighth street and Avenue A.

He denied having assaulted any one, but as the girl was willing to swear that she had been hit, he was taken to the police station.

Prosecutor, Justice Voorhis, at Yorkville Court, gave the prisoner a lecture and discharged him.

SUES BEFORE SEPARATING.

Divorce Sought by a Man Said to Be Living with His Wife.

In the Court of Common Pleas is docketed the suit for absolute divorce against the wife, Ida, of Daniel Moscovitz, against his wife, Ida. The uncommon feature of this case is that, pending a trial and decision in the suit, both plaintiff and defendant are said to be living together in apparent peace and contentment as husband and wife.

Four years ago, then, caused Daniel's arrest for breach of promise, and he was locked up in Ludlow Street Jail. To retain his liberty Moscovitz offered to marry the girl. He fled to Europe as soon as he was released from jail and remained away several months.

Then he returned and married Ida, but left her soon after the ceremony. She caused his arrest for abandonment, and again he fled to Europe, and he is now said to be living with her in a house on the East River.

The suit will be tried next week.

HE BURNED HER CLOTHING.

Louis Isbel's Common-Law Wife Causes His Arrest.

Louis Isbel, a bartender, out of work, living at 218 East Thirtieth street, was held $5 for disorderly conduct, and held in $20 bail for carrying a pistol, by Justice Voorhis, at the Yorkville Police Court, today.

Isbel was arrested on the complaint of Clara Isbel, who he claimed is his common-law wife.

The couple have been living as man and wife for the past three years.

She said that she has been the main support of the house, while Louis travelled around as a sport. He said that he did all the work, and that she led a life of ease.

She wanted to part from him last evening, which caused a fight. Policeman Clinton, of the East Thirtieth street squad, was on his post when his attention was attracted by the cries of the woman. He rushed into the room.

Louis escaped by another door, but was subsequently captured in a saloon. She told Clinton that when she threatened to leave him he became violent, and after a fight he burned her clothing and the contents of her trunk.

When arrested he had a pearl-handled revolver in his possession.

MINNIE SELIGMAN SUE.

Playwright Loudoun Demands $10,000 for Breach of Contract.

She Wouldn't Play His Plays and She Makes Countercharges.

A suit at law that will arouse public interest in general and enlist the attention of the theatrical fraternity in particular, is that brought against Minnie Seligman-Cutting by Wood D. Loudoun, a theatrical manager, to recover $10,000 damages for breach of contract. The case has been entered on the calendar of the Court of Common Pleas, and it is on the trial docket for the first Monday this month.

Through his lawyers, Smith, Bowman & Close, Loudoun, in his bill of complaint, says that in August, 1883, Minnie and he entered into an agreement by which she was to star exclusively in plays of his own composition. Her salary was to be $100 a week.

Loudoun avers that Mrs. Seligman-Cutting refused to perform in a single one of his dramas. That is why Mr. Playmaker Loudoun considers he is entitled to $10,000 indemnity.

In her answer the actress denies that she broke any contract, but that on the other hand Loudoun himself violated the terms by engaging performers who were not permitted, which was one of the stipulations of the agreement. In addition, Mrs. Seligman-Cutting claims that Loudoun's actions were in such a debilitated condition as to utterly preclude all possibility of her being "starred" properly.

SAYS HE'S A NEW YORK MEDICO.

Fellow Arrested for Attempting to Sell a Medical Certificate.

(By Associated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—Ralph Pohlman, who claims to be graduated from a reputable medical college, and who gives New York City as his home, was arrested last night while attempting to sell a certificate to Mrs. A. F. Fennell, a wealthy clothing dealer. The statement of the lawyers brought to light the fact that Pohlman enters one of the most remarkable defenses ever made in a civil suit in the courts of this city.

According to the statements of the plaintiff's attorneys, Cohen, Bull & Co., doing business under the name of A. H. King & Co., failed.

The firm afterwards effected a settlement with creditors and has since made another assignment.

In the settlement mentioned they gave Hammerlough Bros., who were among their creditors, upon aggregating $200,000, endorsed by Pohlman, who is a son-in-law of one of the members of the insolvent firm.

A short time ago one of the notes fell due, and when an attempt was made to collect from Hammerlough Bros., it was found that the signature on the notes was his, but that he had no recollection of having made the endorsements.

He said that a short time before the date of the endorsements he was thrown from a wagon and struck his head, and that for a time thereafter his mind was not altogether right, and at times he did not know what he was doing.

He alleges that it must have been during a time when he was not responsible for his actions that he made the endorsements.

The attorneys further allege that since the endorsements were made, Pohlman has been in the city of New York, and has been seen by several persons who are known to the attorneys.

It is further alleged that Pohlman has been seen by several persons who are known to the attorneys.
